10,000 bushels of Oats, and all of the Corn, which the highest price will be paid in cash

N. B. A few words to those that the coat fits What an awful thing it is to sell Whiskey. Oh, deplorable wretch that does it! He has no consence! He is destitute of all manly principles This is the language of a few would-be men of this place. As for my part, I admit I sell Whiskey. Of course, according to the above declara-tion I must be a very devilish sreature! but what will some persons say to making a child's bargain. And that is this: When you quit slandering your at our establishment on Columbia street, between betters, and will come up like men and pay your just debts, and not lie eternally, and set time to time for years, then; I say when that comes to be

> A few words, I say, you will find to be true. Attend to your business, and you wil have enough to do.
